“ There is a hole in my heart where Ann and Chuck resided for the last 26 years. They were the dearest of friends, and I will miss them always. I will miss Chuck drumming at the table after dinner, his many stories, and his belly laughs while telling them. His engineering skills helped solve a myriad of mechanical problems, and I appreciate his generosity solving them. Many a night was spent speaking of history and his passion for it. Dinners with him and Ann were always great entertainment. He was set in his ways, as we all are, but he and Ann showed me immense kindness and compassion as I navigated life.

“ Anne and "Chuck"--I knew him as Chuck--would regale us with tales of Ohio and flying when we would have dinners together over the years.

I suspect Chuck was hard to get along with at times, and I feel sorry for the folks whose paths only crossed when he was in what I'll bet could be a mood, but regardless, we loved both Anne and Chuck, and am pleased to report that I cooked Chuck what he reported was the best filet he'd ever had, and I was fortunate enough to get a chance to cook this for him one last time in the weeks leading up to Chuck's passing.

I miss Anne, and now I will miss Chuck as well.

A bit of color has left our life and will be missed.
