“ There is a small difference in a short sale and a rlaeuqr purchase. A short sale has been negotiated between a person in foreclosure or with the possibility of losing their home and the lender with the help of a real estate agent. The lender has agreed on a price that they are willing to sell this property at to avoid a possible foreclosure. Once this negotiation has been completed the lender at this point will very seldom if ever change the agreed upon sales price. A short sale must be purchased through a real estate agent. You might consider a buyer's agent to represent you as some states require different real estate agents to represent the buyer and the seller. In states where real estate agents are authorized to represent both the seller and the buyer you may simple call the agent listing the property. A rlaeuqr sale is when a home owner or someone with the power to sell a property. Most use a real estate agent to assist in the selling of their property. A few attempt at selling their property on their own. You might negotiate the sales price with a lower offer to both a person selling their own property of if you are utilizing a real estate agent to represent you the buyer. When a person is attempting to sell their own property you need not have a real estate agent. I hope this has been of some benefit to you, good luck.
