“ Memories I have many.. I was a problem child who couldn't be tamed.. I got into some trouble for school but really this time it was for defending myself not just being a bad ass.. You came to pick me up and wanted to speak to the principle because you believed me and didn't think it was right.. As the meeting goes on you are getting frustrated and and continued to say "she didn't ask that kid to grab her ass and she reminded him of that" why is this a issue?? Meeting still going no where the principle says I'm sorry sir but you smell of alcohol and your response to me was priceless "well sir that would be because I drink beer" as we were leaving the school you said well your not in trouble in my eyes want a tattoo?? And tattoo shop is where we ended up.. You always left me know when I was wrong and stood behind me when I wasn't!! Love you always Papa John..

“ I remember when you first took me to Lauzus bar in the old neighborhood. It was right after a concert we went to in Philly. I was 16 first time I was ever in a bar or got served. We drank till 1:30 then I had to go home to mom who thank god was trying to sleep with the lights off as I staggered in. Well she found out I was drinking the next day from my dad who heard from his friends in the bar hay we met you sons last night and drank with them. Well next concert comes up and mom tells dad to handle the drinking thing . My dad says to you hay john no drinking tonight understand. My brother being a wise ass never cracks a smile and says don't worry Len their will be no drinking tonight my dad say good john say we are going to do acid instead that way dean wont have a hangover lol.

“ I remember all the time in the mountains he would always yell at me to keep the fishing line in the water trying to teach me something and he taught me that and also taught me how to be patient even though I wanted to go to a new spot (fishing spot) he would always say "Deaven there are fish in here there are fish there and there are fish there also this did not mean any thing at the time but now that I look back he thought me a important lesson that be patient and wait for ur time do not quit there are always chances and there will always be chances.

He took fishing very serious I made him mad also lol. I can say though when no one was catching fish he was he was a natural at it . I know he found peace in fishing he loved it funny thing was when we were younger he never ate them he gave them to me to eat. Opening day of trout was like a holiday for him and he always got his limit while i got snagged in the trees lol.

“ I remember you made me laugh. I remember you loved me. I remember our childhood and how you pushed the limits and I always told on myself! I remember dad taking us fishing and tending cows with you to earn 50 cents. I remember we fought like cats and dogs or like brother and sister. I remember I prayed for you. I remember God forgives us. I will choose to remember the good times and the Little I knew. Blessings to your family as they grieve the loss of the man they'll always remember and love, as you loved them too.

“ It was the year 1976 I found out you joined the army and was leaving for basic training in a few weeks. You took me in the living room and opened the gun cabinet and sat me down and said while you were gone i was in charge of your hunting guns. You showed me how to oil them and keep them clean.It was the first time in my life I was allowed to touch your guns and our mom never said anything it was a loving brother showing his little brother how to respect a weapon. You said while you was gone I was to oil them every couple of months and I was the man of the house now and treat them with respect. Well as time passed I at night oiled your guns every couple of months and kept them clean. Mom would watch me and could see I loved taking care of your things and was proud you gave me the job. When you returned on leave mom said when she thought I was outside to check your guns. I hid in the kitchen and watched you open the cabinet and inspected the guns. They both smiled at each other and he said great job my mom said john he missed you so much and oiled them and kept them safe. You never said good job i just knew.
