“ Warren W. J. MacAdams was the brother of my great grandmother, the late Thelma M. MacAdams Lindsay. I heard of many stories about him. Warren was a great patriot. Warren also cooked for general George Patton during the second world war. I only had the chance of meeting him once. Warren also made sticky buns for his family. Warren would let my grandmother and my grand uncle have one on one condition (if they drank diet soda). Warren owned a restaurant called the Dorion on the New Jersey coast in Ocean City, NJ.
